

Clan MacLaren Society Of North America

Clan History

Clan MacLaren (Clan Labhran) is an ancient clan having occupied the lands in Balquhiddy and Strathearn since well before the 12th Century, where they were the predominant clan. The MacLarens were strong supporters of the Celtic Earls of Strathearn, and as such, were tenants of that very significant Earldom until it was forfeited to the Crown in 1344. Subsequently, the MacLarens became tenants of the Crown without actual ownership of the land.

Clan MacLaren took the name Labhran from Laurin, the hereditary Abbot of Achtna in Balquhiddy in the 13th Century. The MacLarens signed the Ragman's Roll in 1296.

The MacLarens were a warlike clan with strong ties to the Stewarts of Appin. The Clan fought at Flodden in 1513, and suffered severely at Culloden on the Prince's side in 1746. Sir Walter Scott visited Balquhiddy on legal business, which he describes in the introduction to "Rob Roy". In "Redgauntlet" he describes the escape of MacLaren of Invernenty after Culloden.

In 1672, after many official records were lost, an Act of Parliament ordained that all nobility and gentry in Scotland register their armorial bearings with the Lord Lyon. Because of the earlier loss of the legal title to Clan lands, the then chiefly head of the Clan Labhran, and his successors, did not trouble to register his arms. The result was that the Clan became officially landless pending the chief's compliance with the Act.

Of course, the Clan continued to recognize its own chiefs, and during the Jacobite rising came out as a Clan. In 1957, Donald MacLaren (father of the current Chief) finally complied with the Lyon King of Arms Act 1672 by recording the ancient Arms in the Lord Lyon Register. The Chief also acquired title to a small part of the traditional Clan lands and the stigma of "chiefless and landless" was removed.

The acquired land included the Clan's ancient rallying site of Creag an Tuirc (The Boar's Rock), which is on a small hill overlooking the Kirk, and can be approached by a fairly steep path. In 1987, the Clan Society erected a cairn to commemorate the founding of the Society.

Another branch of the Clan was connected with Tiree and included the distinguished mathematician Professor Colin Maclaurin.

Chief of Clan MacLaren

The current Chief of Clan Labhran is Donald MacLaren of MacLaren. Donald, who is a retired member of the British Foreign Service, succeeded his father as Chief in 1966. Donald and his wife Maida have five children.

The coat of arms of MacLaren of MacLaren and Achleskine is reserved solely for the use of the Chief. The Clan Badge is for the use of members of the Clan for brooches, cap badges, writing paper, etc. It has a crowned lion with leaves of laurel, and a buckled belt with the slogan "CREAG AN TUIRC".

Clan MacLaren Society of North America

Donald MacLaren, father of the current chief, conceived the idea of a Clan MacLaren Society. The Clan MacLaren Society was organized in Scotland in 1962. As interest in Clan MacLaren spread, the Clan MacLaren Society USA was chartered in Texas in 1967.

The Clan MacLaren Society USA was strictly focused on genealogy, and they compiled a vast amount of information. The Society dissolved in 1979, having met the original goal of assembling a storehouse of MacLaren genealogy.

The Clan MacLaren Society of North America (CMSNA) was chartered in Georgia in 1981. The CMSNA set broad goals in support of Clan MacLaren and the Scottish community in general. The CMSNA has a multifaceted purpose: 1) to support, promote, and publicize Clan MacLaren in the US and Canada; 2) to promote celebration of the family heritage of the MacLarens; 3) to inform members and others about the history, traditions, and accomplishments of Clan MacLaren; 4) to provide a vehicle for interaction and a common bond among North American MacLarens; and 5) to promote education.

Genealogy continues to be a major focus of the CMSNA, with the original Society USA records having expanded many times over.

The Scouting Connection

Gilwell Park in Essex is the principal training ground for British scout leaders. The Park was gifted by William F. de Bois MacLaren in 1919, and, in his memory, a scout who has gained his wood badge wears a patch of MacLaren tartan on his neckerchief. The CMSNA has established a special membership and any scout who has earned the Wood Badge may join the Society.

Officers of the CMSNA are an elected President and Vice-President, and the Immediate Past President. The officer positions of Secretary, Treasurer, Membership Secretary, Assistant Secretary/Treasurer, Liaison Officer, Quartermaster, Editor, Genealogist, and Legal Counsel are appointed. A Clan Council, composed of the officers and regional representatives from the geographic areas of the US and Canada, is responsible for governing the Society. Society business is conducted at an Annual General Meeting or at such times as other meetings are called. In addition, other Society activities are handled by various standing or special committees.

The CMSNA also offers the opportunity for membership in the Clan MacLaren Society of Scotland. Annual or life dues for that society may be paid through the CMSNA.

Newsletter

The CMSNA publishes a quarterly digital newsletter, The MacLaren Standard. The newsletter provides the membership with information on Clan activities, as well as featuring articles on such topics as history, culture, and genealogy.

Highland Games

The CMSNA is a fixture at most of the major Highland games held in the US and Canada.

The Clan MacLaren Society of Scotland maintains a tent at the Lochearnhead Games in Scotland, and are always delighted to welcome clans-folk from all over world. The Games are generally held on the third Saturday of July each year. Lochearnhead has become a famous water sports center and excellent accommodations are available in the area.

Membership Eligibility

You automatically become a member of Clan MacLaren by birth, marriage, or adoption. Membership in the CMSNA will enable you to fully participate in Clan activities and celebrations. To become a member of the Society, simply visit our tent at one of the many Highland Games or Scottish festivals held each year across the US and Canada, write the Membership Secretary, or go to the website: www.clanmaclarennna.org
